

I support Nick Leggett's proposal for requiring most commercially manufactured Amateur Radio transmitters and receivers to be field-repairable in some manner. Too often, commercial amateur gear needs to be sent to the factory for simple board replacements. This is costly for the Amateur who is capable of doing such repairs in the field.